Dedication

We, the Class of 1962, lovingly dedicate this, our Senior Yearbook, to Mr. John Carroll, Teacher of Modern Problems and Coach of Baseball. Mr. Carroll is also an assistant in Football.

A native of Malden, Massachusetts, Mr. Carroll is a graduate of Malden High School and Duke University. Before coming to Natick he served as a teacher-coach at Georgetown and Malden, Massachusetts. He has also coached at Waltham.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll now live in Framingham. They are the parents of two boys and a girl. We wish them happiness in their new home.

FOOTBALL

The "61" football team, after steadfastly enduring the heat of late August and early September, opened its season against a strong Walpole team, defeating it 12-8.

The following week the squad played a really fine game, only to lose in the last forty seconds to Wellesley, who went on to be undefeated and take the Bay State League title. The next week Natick went to Woburn to play the team picked to capture the Class B State Championship.

The "61" squad bounced back from its previous week's defeat by playing magnificently and leaving Woburn with a 20-20 tie.

Going into its fourth game, Natick met a rough Dedham team, losing to it 20-14. On the next Saturday the team lost a real close one to Milton 8-6. After that blow, however, Natick flared up by walloping a highly noted Needham squad 20-6.

The squad kept it going by swamping Braintree 34-6 and Norwood 26-12 on the following Saturdays. The "61" football players met their final test on Thanksgiving Day when, on a snow-cleared field covered with wood chips and shavings to make the muddy footing less hazardous, the boys shut out Framingham 8-0.

The boys of the "61" team had exceptional leadership in their fine captain, Cliff Cutaia, who headed them from his guard position. Nino Leccacorvi, Michael Torti, Alan Peterson, and Richard Leach were all seniors that composed the line from tackle to tackle, and all turned in regular top notch performances. Other seniors such as John Morgan, Eric Mussen, Ken Barone, Robert Shea, Art Powers, and John Kehaioglou also saw a lot of action. Richard Brandt, Richard Schneekloth and Bill Maxwell were always available and faithful to their team and school. In the backfield, Al Calzini, Robert Hale, Lawrence Hines, Al Morgan, James Cox, and Ralph Pryor are all seniors who will be hard to replace next year.

In the line, Captain-elect Justin Hughes and Joseph Pryor were regulars at the ends.

CHEERLEADERS

This year's squad led by Captain Donna Pineo has been one of the most competent and enthusiastic squads in Natick High's history. The long and diligent hours spent in practice were rewarded by fine precision shown at all the athletic functions.

The cheerleaders are: Seniors: Donna Pineo, Donna Campisi, Cheryl Dunston, Ann Sheasgreen, Lynn Theroux. Juniors: Susan Ambler, Janice Borger, Ann Collins, Michele Feldman, Judy Ghilani and Gail Uhlin. We appreciate the fine job the girls have done and wish to thank them.

R. Cote, R. Boudreau, R. Wright, R. Hayes. Fourth row: S. Ghalant, J. Sanford, P. Keany, R. Tiberio, J. Robinson, J. Gunner, J. Craig, R. McGovern, D. Benjamin, P. Lauro, R. Cudmore, J. Warren. Back row: R. Clauson, S. Chambers, R. Penswick, M. Hicks, E. Solomon, R. Parris, G. Batten, R. Cunningham, M. Kriger, D. Gerber, P. Hammond, D. Peoples, R. Rourke, W. Hadden.

The Natick High School track team had its first undefeated season of dual competition in the Metropolitan League, Division II, this year. The track team, under the able direction of Coach Whelan, produced victories over Arlington (39-38), Sommerville (53-24), Belmont (45-32), North Quincy (50-27), and Watertown 52-25). The season was highlighted by a third place finish in the Class "B" State Meet.

Captain Eric Mussen did an admirable job this year, producing many needed points in the 300, 600, and relay. Charles Griffis (high jump and relay) and Harold Godden (1,000 and mile) were other consistent senior point winners. Other seniors who contributed greatly were Nino Leccacarvi (shot-put), Tim Connelly (1,000), James Benton (50), Ken Henderson (600), Fred Hale (1,000 and mile), Thomas Whipp (mile), David Fisher (high jump), and Robert Cooper (shot-put).

CROSS COUNTRY

Led by Captain Harold Godden, the Natick High School Cross Country team had a record of six wins and two losses. The most exciting and heartbreaking race occurred at Needham where Natick was defeated 28-27, one point standing between Natick and the Bay State championship.

In the Bay State League Meet the team avenged its only other defeat by finishing second ahead of Milton. In the State Meet at White Stadium Natick made a very creditable showing by finishing fifth in the Class B competition.

The strong running of Captain Godden, Richard Coté, and Bob Cunningham supported by Tom Whipp, Fred Hale, Richard Parris, Steve Dubosky, and Bob Proire contributed to a successful season.

The Junior Varsity also had a fine season by winning the Bay State Meet at Walpole, placing Chris Szpakowski, Tom Fahey, Dave Hunter, Chip Chambers and Phil Irving among the first ten finishers.

Front row: J. Hughes, P. Hurd, C. Cutaia, W. LaCouture, G. Omerso, P. Schneekloth, F. Fitzgerald, M. Carr, W. Presutti. Second row: Mr. Marcoux, A. Jensen, N. Lecontre, J. Francoise, T. VanTassel, P.

Bacon, S. Knight, T. Gilbert, S. Cotter, K. Pease, R. Hayes, J. Kiley, F. Capizzo, K. Lowden, P. Irving.

HOCKEY

This year's varsity hockey team, captained by Gary Omerso and coached by Mr. Francis Marcoux, was a young squad with only four seniors in the lineup. Thus pre-season speculation predicted a gloomy season. After a slow start, the boys surprised everyone but themselves by keeping abreast with the leaders, Walpole and Needham, during the last half of the season. Then Natick defeated Walpole and tied Needham in two of the most exciting games of the season to capture fourth place in the tough Bay State League with a record of seven wins, five losses, and two ties, finishing just three games from the league lead. Two of the seven wins were over our arch rival, Framingham, which is quite a tribute to Coach Marcoux and the entire team.

Fourth position in the league, however, is not indicative of the true calibre of the team, since the Bay State League was generally regarded as the most powerful circuit in Massachusetts. All of Natick's losses, except for one, were at the hands of the top teams in the league, and most could have gone either way.

Gary Omerso at right wing was a fine leader. With the other seniors Cutaia, Hurd, and LaCouture, he led his team to a successful season. Both LaCouture and our fine forward, Frank Capizzo, were selected for the Bay State League All-star team.

BASKETBALL

The Natick High School basketball team of 1961-1962 finished a successful season with an 11-5 record and has qualified for a berth in the Eastern Massachusetts "Tech" Tourney. The team displayed a fighting spirit throughout the year which enabled them to defeat Framingham twice and top Wellesley in the final game of the season to qualify for post-season competition.

This was an all-senior team, with one exception, so there was no "Wait until next year" for these boys and they played every game to the fullest; never once being out of contention until the final buzzer. This fighting spirit enabled the players to ignite the spark that gave them the desire to win when the chips were down.

In the statistics department, two boys scored over two hundred points, with Joe Pryor hitting for 238 and Steve Adelman hitting for 222. Both Joe and Steve were the high rebounders for the team. Dan Carr, a senior transfer student from Virginia, was quick to pick up the Natick spirit and was a great asset to the team. A great deal of credit should go to Coach Fran Cary and the co-captains Ralph Pryor and Jim Cox who provided the coaching and leadership necessary to make the season a successful one.

SENIOR PLAY

THE MATCHMAKER

by
THORNTON WILDER

On Friday evening, November 17, 1961, the Class of 1962 presented Thornton Wilder's four-act farce, The Matchmaker, directed by Mr. Harry L. Garnett of the English Department. The following seniors appeared:

Thomas Crowley as Horace Vandergelder
Paul Caswell as Dolly Levi
Vincent Sharkey as Cornelius Hackl
Michele Holovak as Irene Molloy assisted by

Roger Woodbury as Barnaby Tucker
John Linnehan as Malachi Stack
Karen Bittle as Flora Van Huysen
Charles Griffis as Ambrose Kemper
Lois Whittemore as Ermengarde
Margaret Gibbons as Minnie Fay
Richard Harris as Rudolph
Robert Macomber as August
Neal Tompkins as Joe Scanlon
Marilyn Livingstone as Gertrude
Donna Day as The Cook
Harvey Cohen as The Cabman

Horace Vandergelder, a merchant of Yonkers, has just put aside the last dollar of his first half-million. After many years of caution and hard work, he feels that he has the right to a little risk and adventure, so he thinks of getting married. To find him a suitable bride, one that is young, attractive, docile, thrifty, and with an income of her own, he employs a matchmaker, Dolly Levi, whose outstanding characteristic is her inability to refrain from meddling in the lives of others. Thus she involves Vandergelder's well-trained, menial clerks and acquaintances with assorted young and lovely ladies and includes two waiters, three philosophers of sorts, and an eccentric recluse just to complicate her scheme of things.

As Dolly says several times, "One thing leads to another." At the end of the play everyone has his heart's desire, even Vandergelder, who, after four acts, is convinced that the kind of wife he really wants as a bossy, scheming, inquisitive, spendthrift woman like Dolly Levi.

Music was provided by Mr. Lo Presti and the Dance Band. A Barbershop quartet composed of Tom Moore, Mike Fronk, Steve Bent, and Dick Harris, while shaving Bob Disney, provided humor between the acts.

WELCOME—CLASS DAY

Parents, Teachers, and Friends:

It is with great pleasure that we, the Class of 1962, welcome you to our Class Day Exercises. On this happy occasion as we look back over the last twelve years we are filled with happy memories, for they have been happy years. On Class Day perhaps more than on any other day we recall the happy moments of our school days, made more memorable by the realization that today may be the last time we shall be together as a class.

We invite you to share our happiness, and we extend to you our deepest appreciation for having made the twelve years profitable as well as happy. The training we have received here will be our foundation for the future. On this foundation we shall do our best to build lives that will make you proud of us.

Ronald Bleakney
President
Class of 1962

WELCOME—GRADUATION

Parents, Teachers, Friends:

Tonight we, the Class of 1962, are taking part in our last school activity as students of Natick High School; tomorrow we shall begin the next stage of the journey toward our goals. Perhaps, as we look with anticipation to the future, we might fittingly look back on the preparation for it we have received within these walls.

We have learned that education is not merely the mastery of subject matter, but the ability to apply what we have learned in meeting the challenges before us: the challenge of democracy at home; the challenge of its enemies abroad; the challenge of living on this earth; and the challenge of exploring beyond it. We face these challenges with confidence.

With sincere gratitude to you who have made these fruitful years possible for us, we welcome you to our graduation exercises.

"I thought my life was over." These were the words of a man who slipped from a sixth-floor window ledge, crashed to the street below, and lived. The fall cracked his spine, paralyzing him from the waist down. Today, this man, with only the aid of braces and crutches for support, is able to get around by himself, even going up and down stairs.

Though this may sound unbelievable, it was brought about by a nerve stimulator, a recent discovery in the field of bioelectronics. Dr. Adrian Kantrowitz, a cardiovascular surgeon, attached wires from the nerve stimulator to the dead muscles in the man's legs. Upon turning the knobs on the machine, the paralyzed man stood up, then sat down. "I felt as though an invisible hand were pushing me," he said later. Actually his movement was caused by the shock of an electronic current. The doctor then took measurements with the stimulator, and installed within the man a small electronic device which could control the movement of his legs. It is hoped that in the future this technique will be perfected so as to enable such victims to walk normally.

Bioelectronics is a new science concerned mainly with the creation of tiny electronic brains used to operate crippled or diseased organs in the body. At present there are over a hundred persons in America who owe their lives to bioelectronics. Their hearts are kept beating by electronic boxes known as pacemakers. On the basis of present experimentation, scientists say that there is also hope for the deaf and the blind through this field. In the next twenty-five years, thousands of people will have electronics running their bodies.

But bioelectronics is just one of the many new frontiers being explored in modern laboratories. Medical scientists are now on the brink of creating living matter, an act which will open the door not only to the cure of many diseases now considered hopeless, but also to the creation of human life in a test tube. The most important parts of a living cell are the nucleic acids and the amino acids; without them, no cell can grow and reproduce. It has been shown that some types of anemia occur because of misplaced amino acid units in the red blood cells, that some types of mental illness in children occur because the body cells fail to use one of the acids, and the mongoloids have as many as a thousand extra genes. Thus if scientists can discover how to switch amino acids or alter the nucleic acids in living cells, they may be able to wipe out these diseases.

Viruses are described by Linus Pauling, a Nobel Prize winner at the California Institute of Technology, as "the last, great, unconquered area of infectious disease." A virus is made up of nucleic acid surrounded by a wall of protein, and can only multiply in living cells. Thus it attacks living cells, its nucleic acid killing the cell and causing disease. Once the chemical composition and the way in which the acid of a virus cell differs from that of a healthy cell are positively determined, it will be possible to produce a drug which will destroy the virus without doing harm to the cell.

Cancer is one of the most dreaded diseases in the world today. It strikes mysteriously, spreads relentlessly, and is accompanied by agonizing pain in the final stages. Although the cause of cancer is not actually known, there is a growing belief that it is caused by a virus. There is also hope that a certain virus will be discovered which will attack and destroy the nucleic acids of the cancerous cells. Here again, scientists hope to discover a drug which will act upon the diseased cells without harming the healthy ones.

The future development of two machines for the study of cancerous cells will aid scientists greatly in their search for the cause and cure of cancer. The first is a computing machine which will take only one and a half seconds to examine ten thousand cells electronically. It will discover any change in the consistency of the cell or the density of the nucleus. The second will enable scientists to record automatically the changes in living human cells as they grow. The microscope-camera will observe the tiniest structural changes which occur. By this machine, the reaction of the cells to chemical agents known to cause and retard cancer growth will be observed.

Another leading cause of death in the United States today taking even more lives than cancer is hypertension, or high blood pressure. This condition puts a critical strain on the heart and blood vessels. At the present time, drugs are being used in daily doses to keep high blood pressure down, but it is hoped that a permanent solution will be found in the future. Scientists are basing their present experimentation on the belief that hypertension is caused by minute quantities of angiotonin, a substance produced in the blood stream and then quickly destroyed. This substance has recently been synthesized, but in quantities large enough to work with. When it is discovered what chemicals will destroy this substance, high-blood pressure will be conquered.

Concerning the subject of mental illness, I would like to quote Dr. Ralph Gerard of the University of Michigan: "There can be no twisted thought without a twisted molecular medicine or biochemistry." Conditions such as lack of energy, mental disorders, and decreased vitality, which were once assumed to come inevitably with old age, are now believed to be caused by chemical reactions which convert one chemical substance to another. Although the only difference between the two substances is one atom of oxygen, the lack of the enzyme to make this conversion causes a mental deficiency which accounts for one out of every hundred patients in our mental institutions. The cure for this illness lies in the discovery and injection of the unknown enzyme into the body. Thus biochemistry is also very important in the future of medical research.

In concluding, I would like to say that, no matter how simple the solutions to some of these problems may sound, man is still a long way off from his goal in medical science. Each answer found presents a hundred new questions. The process of experimentation and discovery, finding cause and cure, is a slow and tedious one, but man will never give up searching for the answers in this endless quest.

NEW FRONTIERS IN SPACE RESEARCH

by

ROLF A. FRANTZ, JR.

Though the phrase "the Space Age" has been used so often in all forms of writings and speech that it has become trite and aggravating, it still is true. The final frontier in a geographic sense is space; the spread of civilization westward around the globe has used up all uncivilized areas—the next jump must be outward into space. Space is also the infinite frontier in a scientific sense; the fields of limited scope have been thoroughly covered—scientific is poised on the infinite frontier of space. Stress is being applied to man's efforts to leave the restrictions of this planet, not only in a scientific, but also in a political sense. The conquest of space has become a battleground for the conflicting American and Soviet ideologies.

The history of space research is well known. The development of rockets by ancient Chinese, their development into military weapons, and Hitler's use of the first real missile, the V-2, in the bombardment of England during World War II have been covered in innumerable Sunday supplement sections of all the major newspapers. These same supplements have also introduced to the American public the great Russian space flight theorist, Konstantin Tsiolkovsky, and the leading American pioneer, Professor Robert Goddard of Worcester. Tsiolkovsky predicted modern technological achievements in 1903; Goddard launched a liquid-fuel rocket at Auburn, Massachusetts, on March 16, 1926. And, of course, we should not neglect the German Society for Space Travel, which, until it was taken over by Hitler to develop rocket weapons, was the leading experimenter in rocket research.

However, despite Professor Goddard's lead, Americans did not take the forefront in space research. For the decade following World War II the American program was content to fire some captured V-2's and a few American missiles in a study of the upper atmosphere, setting the now widely publicized altitude records. More important than our work, though, was the Soviet space program, which did not aim for altitude records, but rather for investigation of space itself. The United States fell behind due to several years of inadequate and misdirected research. The space program was relegated to a fourth-line standing with respect to other government programs. All this, however, I am sure you have heard before. My purpose in reiterating it now is to place it fresh in your minds to serve as a basis for an analysis of our standing in space exploration today.

Let us, then, turn to such an analysis, concerning ourselves with the answers to two vital questions: "Where do we stand in a scientific sense?" and "Where do we stand with respect to the Soviet space program?" The answers are entirely different. They could also be highly technical in content, but to avoid confusion we shall avoid a technical discourse.

Our first study is the question of our scientific standing. In spite of the disheartening comments of many supposedly informed news writers and commentators, we hold a position we can well be proud of, and could well be content with, were it not for the Soviet challenge. Adaptations of our existing research tools could enable us to perform the following missions:

- a) Orbit low-altitude satellites weighing up to five tons.
- b) Orbit high-altitude satellites of greater than one ton.
- c) Land intact 1000 pounds of instruments on the moon.
- d) Land intact slightly more than 1000 pounds of instruments on Mars or Venus.
- e) Send 1000 pounds of instruments to probe the atmosphere of Jupiter.
- f) Place a man in orbit and recover him after several days of orbital flight.

Of course, our program is not perfect; it also embodies several inadequacies. For example, our present guidance systems and communications systems are just barely advanced enough for use on interplanetary flights. Tracking and re-entry procedures require improvement. Finally, there is the ultimate question of reliability; though present instruments have a high degree of reliability, we need to improve them further before it is worthwhile to launch interplanetary missions. Thus our existing equipment can, with a few improvements, provide for an expansive program of space research. The future promise—the development of the DYNA-Soar orbital glider, and of atomic and ionic propulsion systems—is even more impressive.

The cloud on this bright picture is the Soviet challenge, which readily dims the bright image that we have thus far envisaged. The attitudes of Americans toward Soviet space science are at extremes: Some feel America is scientifically invincible; others, due to the Russian satellite successes, rate us as a third-class scientific power. The truth is between these extremes. The Soviets possess certain advantages, but the United States has certain leads, also. Russian spacecraft have far outweighed ours; their smallest satellite weighed several times what our first one did. Therefore, they possess a lead with regard to power—their rockets far outdo ours in thrust. However, the American satellites utilized far smaller, more reliable, and longer lasting electronics equipment, a factor which has proved invaluable to our program. Also, though the Russians have been first, the Americans have been more numerous. The United States has launched at least a dozen more satellites than the Soviet Union, and several more lunar and solar probes; we have more of our satellites still in orbit, and have had greater success with our space probes. Despite the willingness of Soviet scientists to risk their astronauts' lives unnecessarily, as contrasted with our cautious and extremely safe program, and despite their early launchings and more spectacular shots, a large number of our most reputable scientists state that we have learned more from our launchings.

Therefore, the general survey places us in an excellent position scientifically, but in a very competitive position with respect to the Soviets. The prospects for the future? A continuation of the competition as both nations increase their capabilities at fairly equal rates.

To us as a graduating class the challenge is open. The frontier needs to be expanded; each of our abilities can enable us to play a role in this great adventure of man. Science and mathematics students may be the researchers of tomorrow; business students may fill the vital administrative posts; students who have skills with tools may build tomorrow's space research vehicles; those in the military may be among the future astronauts. Each interest and skill we possess can enable us to fill a role as a pioneer in the advancement of man's last and greatest frontier, that of the void which surrounds us and extends infinitely into all dimensions.

CLASS HISTORY

by

MARILYN LIVINGSTONE AND ALFRED GREENQUIST

Four years ago the Class of 1962 took its first precarious steps into Natick High School. Even then we made a profound impression on this school, revealing on optimistic future. This was a unique class—the last class to enter Natick High School as freshmen.

To hold up tradition our class began with many prominent successes. In athletics, the freshman football team defeated Framingham. In the science fair, James Mannos won the general science first prize for his project on earth satellites.

Even in those days we had ideas on the privileges of students as a whole. To bring across these ideas, we elected Donna Campisi, Robert Allison, James Hubbard, Robert Pipe, and Ralph Pryor to the student council.

In the sophomore year the Class of 1962 gradually increased its pace, as it began to develop as a dynamic unit. We had elected our class officers: Robert Pipe, president; Michele Holovak, vice-president; Cheryl Dunston, secretary; Nancy Sheer, treasurer. We also elected our representatives to the student council as our influence increased. John Morgan, Ronald Bleakney, Jane MacKenzie, Charles Griffis, Michele Holovak, Cynthia Hall, and Donna Campisi were chosen.

Nor were we lacking in the sciences. In the field of biology, Neal Tompkins received first prize in the science fair and entered the Massachusetts State Science Fair at M.I.T. and the Worcester State Science Fair, where he received an honorable mention.

Being a well-rounded class, we also had social interests. On May 6, 1960, we held our sophomore dance on the theme "Underwater Fantasy." With Donna Campisi as our general chairman, it was an unqualified success.

At the close of the year, Cheryl Dunston, Donna Pineo, and Lynn Theroux joined the Natick High cheerleaders. They were members of the group that won first prize in the Bay State League Competition.

As our sophomore year gradually closed, we were again placed in an historical position—we were the last class ever to know what an X period was. Through all these experiences, we were at last prepared for our role as upperclassmen.

During the summer many students decided to get a head start on the junior year by taking advanced courses at the Harvard-Newton Summer School.

Our junior year started very successfully under the astute leadership of our class officers—president, John Morgan; vice-president, Donna Campisi; secretary, Lorraine Connell; treasurer, Cynthia Hall. We also elected Nancy Sheer, Lynn Theroux, Michele Holovak, Donna Campisi, Charles Griffis, and John Morgan to the student council. Lynn Theroux brought further honor to our class when she was elected vice-president of the Eastern Massachusetts Division of Student Councils.

Between our full athletic schedule and our first taste of college boards and the P.S.A.T. exams, we were a busy class throughout the year.

We had good cause to be proud of two of our science students. Neal Tompkins won first prize in advanced biology for his project, Effect of Sound on Algae, and James Mannos won third prize in physics with his project, Digital Computers. James also went on to participate in the Science Seminar Program.

Many of our students started showing their acting ability in the school musical that spring, Best Foot Forward, directed by Mr. Garnett. Paula Caswell, Ruth Sauro, and Robert Disney had leading parts.

In April Mr. Hennigar announced that twelve members of our class had been elected to the National Society. They were: Lynne Berman, Elaine Evans, Rolf Franz, Charles Griffis, Alfred Greenquist, Nancy Grey, Marilyn Livingstone, Lynn Theroux, Joanne Wiltenburg, Vincent Sharkey, Marcia Woods, and Lois Whittemore.

Later, Donna Campisi was elected to go to Girls' State, and Ronnie Bleakney was chosen to represent us at Boys' State. A few months later, these two outstanding citizens were to win other awards—the D.A.R. Good Citizenship Award for Donna, and the Jewish Good Citizens' Award for Ronald.

Our junior prom was a smashing success, in spite of the rainy weather, due to the efforts of our general chairman, John Morgan, and the many other juniors who worked on the dance. The theme, "A Southern Plantation," lent itself beautifully to a gala evening.

Scholastically we had many fine achievements. Marilyn Livingstone placed second in the regional judgments of the American Federation of Teachers of French exam in second-year French. This was the first time a student from Natick High School ever placed in this exam. On Class Day Rolf Franz received the Harvard Prize Book and Marilyn Livingstone received the Wheaton Club of Wellesley Prize Book for outstanding scholastic achievement.

Even during the following summer our class kept up a fine academic record. Three of our classmates took advanced courses—Tim Connelly at Thayer Academy, Lynne Berman at Notre Dame, and Rolf Franz at Brown.

Our senior year promised to be the best of all. Our new class officers were: Ronald Bleakney, president; Donna Campisi, vice-president; Lorraine Connell, secretary; Michele Holovak, treasurer. We also elected Lynne Berman, Ronald Bleakney, Kenneth Henderson, Michele Holovak, Peter Hurd, John Morgan, Donna Pineo, Vin Sharkey, Bob Shea, Bob Soby, Lynn Theroux, Sandra Trainor, and Robert Pipe to the student council.

Our football captain, Kip Cutaia, led the team on to a successful season. We fared well in other sports, too, under the leadership of Gary Omerso, our hockey captain; Eric Mussen, our indoor track captain; Ralph Pryor and James Cox, our basketball captains; and Ronald Bleakney and Bill LaCoutre, our baseball captains.

As soon as school was under way, we had the tryouts for our senior play, The Matchmaker. The leads were played by Paula Caswell, Tom Crowley, Michele Holovak, Vincent Sharkey, Lois Whittemore, and Charles Griffis. The play was the most successful ever presented at Natick High School, thanks to the able direction of Mr. Garnett. Not only did it draw the largest attendance, it was the most expensive and the most mature production ever presented at this school. Over 300 seniors marched to school from Natick Center on the day of the play to advertise it.

The Christmas Cotillion was the Class of 1962's next project, and it was a tremendous success. Donna Pineo was a beautiful Snow Queen.

Our science quiz team did an admirable job with Vin Sharkey, captain, and John Linnehan, Rolf Franz, Alfred Greenquist, Timothy Connelly and Judy Laming. We were so proud of them when they appeared on WHDH TV.

Two seniors, Rolf Franz and Charles Welty, placed in the finals of the National Merit Scholarship exams. Lynne Berman, Marilyn Livingstone, Charles Griffis, Harold Brack, and John Linnehan received letters of commendation.

In November, twenty more seniors were elected to the National Honor Society. We are the first group of members to have used the new honor study hall system.

Four of Mr. Shea's international relations students lectured at the Quartermaster Corps and at a Rotary Club luncheon. They were very well received.

We were very proud to hear that Timothy Connelly had placed in the finals of the Westinghouse Talent Search.

Not forsaking theatrical ability, many students took part in the musical Our Hearts Were Young and Gay, directed once again by Mr. Garnett. They were Paula Caswell, Ricky Hadden, Vin Sharkey, John Linnehan, Sandra Bryer, Ann Friend, and Steve Adelman.

In closing, we would like to express our sincerest thanks to our class advisors, Miss Connolly and Mr. McNally, whose unceasing efforts have pushed our class to the top. With the deepest sense of humility, the Class of 1962 realizes that it is the greatest class ever to graduate from Natick High School.

THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF THE CLASS OF 1962

by

NANCY GREY AND TIM CONNOLLY

The Illustrious Class of 1962 is about to graduate from the greatly respected and dearly loved campus of Natick High School. In accordance with tradition, we the members of said class present our Last Will and Testament.

To Mr. Hennigar, we leave our continual good humor.

To Mr. Bartnick, we leave our gentlemanly manners and compliant mood.

To Mr. Rosen, we leave an inspiration to start a small fund to eventually buy a computer system for the Guidance Department.

To Mr. Garnett, we leave our sincere thanks for directing Natick High's greatest Senior Play, "The Matchmaker".

We leave Miss Ward's classroom in wonder—"a poem can actually mean something?"

To the Junior Class we leave the long-awaited title of "Superior Seniors" and the hope that you will follow the path we took, remembering that we became Natick's greatest class through hard work.

To the Sophomores we leave the thought that, "at least you won't be the youngest class anymore."

To Mrs. Brown, we leave an unlimited supply of band-aides and aspirin to nurse all future Seniors and underclassmen.

To Coach Bennett, we leave a bottle of tranquilizers to help him through next year's Framingham game.

To Miss Connolly and Mr. McNally, we leave our sincerest thanks for planning all our class activities and especially our exceptional Junior Prom and for just plain being the wonderful class advisers they were.

To Miss Shannon, and all others connected with our yearbook, our sincere thanks for making it the best ever are left with you.

To all future Senior Classes at Natick High School we leave the wish that Framingham will be defeated for another seventeen years.

To make this easier, we the Class of 1962, leave our uncanny ability to defeat Framingham in every sport. Our other attributes, too numerous to mention, are left for the memory of the unfortunate underclassmen we leave behind.

Our graduation is not without sorrow, however, for the past four years have been well-spent and will always remain a major factor in our lives. Therefore, we now profess our most humble appreciation for the superb education we have obtained.

To the Faculty, the entire teaching staff and other school officials, we leave our thanks for the tremendous interest and patient help you have given us.

To the Athletic Department and all the coaches we offer our best wishes for your continued success on the playing field.

To Mr. McGrath, we leave a hunting license, good all year round, and a book entitled, The Mounty Always Gets His Man.

Several individual members of the Class of 1962 would also like to include their own Last Will and Testament.

We, the girls of the Second-year Shorthand and Transcription class, leave our worn-out notebooks and broken pencils to the girls in Shorthand I who want to work real hard to achieve a high goal.

I, Steve Oettinger, leave my gambling ability to anyone who likes to make money.

I, Lynn Theroux, leave my rather long fingernails to Sue Ambler.

I, Richard Brandt, leave my copy of Communist Manifesto to any subversive person who desires it.

I, Mary Littleton, leave my old grey Chevy to my brother who will be a Sophomore next year.

We, the P.S.S.C. Physics students, leave the book, Twenty-four Hours in a Ripple Tank, to any Juniors interested in taking the course.

I, Linda Rogers, leave my cut-off blond ponytail to anyone who would like a few extra inches of hair.

I, Skip Brack, leave my little blue, yellow, and black books to anyone interested in that sort of thing.

I, Carol Graves, leave Bookkeeping II to anyone daring enough to take it.

I, James Tibbitts, leave my little Nash Rambler to anyone who dares to drive it.

I, Judy Lucas, leave to the Juniors the right to move up in the world and become Seniors, but not until after we've left.

I, Mike Torti, leave what is left of the one and one half inch tape to Mr. (Doc) Leighton.

I, Pat Grillo, leave to Marian Fabiano my two cushions in A-117.

We, Regina Felch and Jackie Richardson, leave our fame as cousins to Jenny Richardson and Butch Phylis, who are also members of our well-known family clan.

I, Ralph Sullivan, leave my mild manners to my brother to improve upon.

I, Herbert Boyd, will my cafeteria badge to the next person who thinks he can wear it.

We, Dorothy Witham and Judy Laming, leave three fireman hats and official licenses to any qualified underclassmen adept at sliding down poles.

We, Kathy Gould and Rose Onorato, leave our executive positions as bookkeepers for the Sassamon to anyone who would enjoy a free "C" period on Monday and Wednesday.

I, Frank Waibel, leave my book, How to Graduate Without Studying, to Donald Wight.

I, Nancy Grey, leave my long eyelashes to anyone who wants to keep dust out of her eyes.

Two Senior girls leave to Sue Finklestein their rendition of "I'm a Bow-legged Chicken," so she, too, may entertain her friends on the hockey bus.

I, Dan Carr, bequeath my patented jump shot to the "mad bomber," and my rebounds to "big Joe."

We, the Senior girls' trio, Ann Friend, Ruth Sauro, and Paula Caswell, leave our voices to anyone brave enough to accept them.

I, Drew Carnegie, leave my solos to Paul Gruppiso, who can probably play them better.

I, Sue Bush, leave my ability to get the boys to push my "clunker" to Barb Levine.

I, Ralph Pryor, leave my track shoes to Ken Pease and my brain to my brother Joe.

We, Brenda Carnaroli and Lynn Brooks, leave to Mr. Carroll a book entitled, How to Keep Your Students Quiet During Assembly.

We, Lynn Theroux and Dorothy Witham, leave the title of "Moose" to Gerald Hall, who will be its sole bearer next year.

We, the Seniors not mentioned above, leave all our athletic, scholastic, and all other great abilities to the underclassmen also not mentioned above.

In witness, whereof, we, the members of the Class of 1962, have set our hand and seal here on Class Day, June 7, 1962, declaring this to be our Last Will and Testament.

GRADUATION DAY SPEECH PROSPECTS FOR EUROPEAN UNITY

by

CHARLES GRIFFIS

A United Europe has long been the dream of many men. Charlmagne, Charles V. Napoleon, and Hitler all tried to unite Europe by force and failed. Today, our generation might witness the peaceful union of Europe.

Why might Europe become peacefully united? Much credit must be given to the United States. Europe was economically destroyed by World War II. The Marshall Plan, set up in 1947, allocated vast sums of the American taxpayer's money for the rebuilding of Europe. This money, which was distributed by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, was given on the condition that the individual nations of Europe cooperate in estimating their needs and spending their funds.

This trend toward European cooperation further manifested itself in the European Coal and Steel Community, which was set up by the Treaty of Paris in 1951. Germany, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxemburg, and Italy pooled the vast resources of the Ruhr, the Saar, and Lorraine under a supranational authority. This supranational authority, which is vested in the High Authority in Brussels, can make decisions which are binding on member nations. The ECSC has been a fantastic success—its steel production equals that of the United States, it has almost completely eliminated taxes on coal and steel production, there is free movement of labor through the six member nations, and it has the best social security and job security in the world.

The European Economic Community, an extension of the ECSC by its member nations to cover all economic facets, was set up by the Treaty of Rome in 1957. The European Atomic Energy Commission (Euratom) was also included in the Treaty of Rome. The EEC has three major functions: 1) to make gradual ten percent tariff cuts between the member nations until zero is reached (by 1966 or sooner), 2) to make tariff rates with non-member nations uniform among member nations, and 3) to protect and give price supports to member nations' agricultural interests. Taken together, the ECSC, the EEC, and Euratom comprise the Common Market.

The Common Market is run by a nine man executive committee called the European Commission, which is located in Brussels. The European Commission develops Common Market policy and supervises daily details of operation. A Council of Ministers, composed of one representative from each of the six member nations, can override European Commission proposals, but only on a unanimous vote. Other forms of Common Market bureaucracy include a Court of Justice, which arbitrates technical disputes, and a Parliament composed of representatives from the member nations who render proposals on economic policy.

How well has the Common Market worked? Very, very well! Its Gross National Product (the yardstick of national economics) is equal to that of the Soviet Union, although one-half that of the United States. The Common Market is the world's largest importer and its second largest exporter. Its gold reserves almost equal those of the United States. The Common Market is as self-sufficient as the United States. Domestic prices have been reduced, European mergers have been fostered, unemployment has been almost eliminated, and the member nations have been drawn closer together.

Great Britain, a nation which has foiled many forceful attempts at European unity, is the key to this latest movement towards unity. The British were asked to join the ECSC in 1951, but they refused. They were asked to join the Common Market in 1957, but they again refused. The British, jealous of the Common Market's economic success, formulated the European Free Trade Association in May of 1960. This association, popularly known as the "Outer Seven" as opposed to the Common Market's "Inner Six," was comprised of Great Britain, Portugal, Switzerland, Austria, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark.

Why did the British not join the Common Market? The British feared the loss of their Commonwealth trade, which accounts for forty percent of their total trade. The EFTA was doomed because of this and because there was no strong underlying motivation for unity.

The British, impressed by and jealous of Common Market strength and discouraged by slumps in Commonwealth trade, applied for Common Market membership in 1961. The British want concessions on trade to their Commonwealth nations and protection for their farmers, but they will have to sacrifice much to the Common Market.

The addition of Great Britain to the Common Market gives even more impetus to the drive for European unity. The economic ties and benefits that bind the member nations are so strong that no nation would wish to pull out of the Common Market. Old feuds and hostilities have been replaced by an international feeling that is pulsating throughout Europe. With the addition of Great Britain, the Common Market nations would have even greater economic power, political power that would match the United States and the Soviet Union, and military power that would rival that of the super powers.

Could there ever be a United States of Europe coming merely from economic unity? Yes! An analogy would be the situation in Belgium, the Netherlands, and Luxemburg. These nations formed a customs union in 1948. This customs union was enlarged into the Benelux Economic Union in 1958. Today there is no border between these three nations, they have the same currency, and politically act as a unit.

European political unity will come about through economic unity, with a strong assist from mutual fear of the power of the Soviet Union.

Jean Monnet, the French internationalist who formulated the ECSC and the Common Market, might peacefully succeed where Charlemagne, Charles V. Napoleon, and Hitler forcefully failed.

NEW FRONTIERS IN REFORM

by
LYNN BERMAN

Although a criminal is defined as a man who violates a law, there are many different kinds of criminals and many different kinds of crime. Generally, crime is divided into three categories: treason, the crime of betraying or attacking a nation; felony, the serious offenses such as murder, robbery, arson, kidnapping, bigamy, forgery, rape, and misdemeanors; the minor crimes such as bribery, receiving stolen goods, malicious libel, assault and battery, disturbance of the peace, and violation of the pure food laws. Although it is up to the discretion of the state and the court, the penalty for a felony is usually imprisonment of more than one year, or death. Punishment for a misdemeanor is more lenient—usually just a fine or a short prison term.

There are, however, other classifications of crimes and criminals. There is the situational criminal, the man who is forced by circumstance to commit that first impulsive crime. At this particular instance, he sees crime as the only way out of a single unbearable or confusing situation. For instance, the man, usually honest, who is out of work and deeply in debt, may attempt to hold up a bank in sheer necessity. Opposite the situational criminal is the chronic offender. It is he who repeatedly breaks the law in one form or another, and who spends his life either dodging the law or in prison. The professional, syndicate criminal comes under this heading as well as the man who merely stumbles into crime. It is also relatively easy for the situational criminal to become a chronic offender, because of irreparable guilt feelings, loss of self respect, or loss of self confidence.

There is also another equally significant way to classify criminals. There are those whose attacks are made upon persons, such as murderers, on public order, such as those who riot, or upon property, such as robbers, as well as those who commit acts which prevent proper law enforcement (bribery), or those who injure the public welfare (embezzlement).

There are, of course, other divisions, which would be insignificant here. Some of these include classification by sex, race, religion, geographical location, and age. For now, all we shall be concerned with is the age divisions: juvenile delinquents and adult criminals.

There are many theories as to the origin of crime and criminals. Lombroso, an Italian criminologist, insisted that a criminal could be recognized and predicted by his facial and cranial structure. For example, a man with a low receding forehead and small, beady eyes was bound to be dishonest. Although this was later emphatically disproved by Goring, an English specialist, it is still a popular concept today.

The debate, environment vs. heredity has been in progress among prominent sociologists and criminologists for decades now, and still, there is no answer. Most, however, believe that crime is caused by two specific influences: poverty and sex. Poverty not only creates need for money, but it also forces poorer living conditions. In slums and low-cost, poor housing, there is a lack of respect and privacy that is appalling. Here, too, all the usual institutions—the family, the church—are weakened to a tremendous degree, while association with the lowest form of human life is inevitable. The extreme shortage of proper recreational facilities to allow people to relax and use leisure time constructively is also evident, and an obvious cause of crime.

Many qualified people insist that sex also plays an important part in crime; behind every man is a woman, and behind every woman, a man. This is demonstrated in robbery for a woman, triangle murders, abortions, and the like.

Juvenile delinquency is also a desperate problem that must be faced. Statistics show that nearly all criminals have records before they are 21, that as the man grows, so grows the crime. It is, therefore, logical that, should delinquency be halted, a good part of adult crime would also cease.

There are as many different opinions on the causes of delinquency as there are people who venture them. Generally speaking, however, there are main reasons. First, lack of understanding, both at home and at school. It has been proven that more than 50 per cent of all delinquents come from homes broken either openly, or subtly through frequent harsh quarrels. Often, too, neglect, alcoholism, lack of control, a working mother, or excessive quarreling among the family contribute to a feeling of resentment, aloneness, and rebellion in a youth.

Schools, too, frequently fail to recognize or understand the delinquent, and all too often the rebellious student comes up against a sarcastic, unsympathetic, and intolerant teachers. Because of this unwise handling, he often either quits school or plays hookey—either way leading straight to delinquency through lack of skill, friends, and diversions.

As with the adult criminal, the environment of a large city affects an adolescent adversely. There he sees bitterness, frustration, failure, apathy, squalor, and dis-organization, and, not having ever seen otherwise, becomes bitter and cynical about his own future. Here, too, he meets drug addictions and alcoholism, two factors which many feel are very important in explaining delinquency.

When a delinquent commits a crime, there are other reasons, more immediate, urgent ones, to explain why he does so. An overwhelming desire for personal glory, the urge to give a "treat" to his friends, the thirst for excitement and adventure, the need for revenge, or the compulsion to fulfill a secret longing—all these are immediate causes of juvenile crime in any class. The last one, the secret longing, can manifest itself many ways. Take the girl who had an irresistible urge to steal baby clothes, though she neither had nor could hope to have a child for a while. Her robbery was not malicious or even intentional—she had a longing for a child which, at the moment, could be satisfied no other way.

There must be a solution. There is. Criminologists have already begun to revolutionize prisons and correctional institutions, adding extensive probational and parole programs! However, they state that there are actually only two goals: to eliminate causes of crime, and to reorient the criminal and society. This is being done already in various ways: parental education, more recreation centers and clubs, officials whose only duty is to find acceptable jobs and good opportunities for criminals, vocational training in prisons—all these ways and more. However, there's much to be done. A higher standard of both political and business morality is needed, a stricter censorship of movies, comic books, and books is suggested, and a deeper understanding and acceptance of criminals by society is mandatory, with the knowledge there always that a can can change.

With these points in mind, the hope is that criminals should become almost non-existent in future years, lessening a tremendous expense and threat, and allowing more citizens to function constructively.

As Carl Schurz, a German immigrant who spoke in Faneuil Hall in 1859, said:

"Ideals are like stars; you will not succeed in touching them with your hands. But like seafaring men on the desert of waters, you choose them as your guides, and, following them, you will reach your destiny."

FRONTIERS IN EDUCATION

by

VINCENT SHARKEY

In an age when the Soviet challenge is becoming more and more evident, great pressure is being placed on our educational system, and demands for better trained and better qualified men in every professional field from accounting to astro-physics are unceasing. Everyone is asking what is wrong with our schools and what can be done to prepare them to meet the challenge of the future? To examine these all-important questions, I will first refer to the major subject areas in our schools and will then mention some of the innovations in the methods of teaching in these subject areas. I must stress, however, that these changes are not being made just for change's sake or merely to show that school systems are flexible, but are made only when those introducing them are confident that they will improve the understanding of a certain subject.

The most important subject in our schools is reading, since it is the broad foundation on which all others are based. From the earliest grades children should be grouped in such a way that the rapid readers may move as swiftly as their capabilities permit and the slow may receive thorough attention. In many schools today, this is being done.

Mathematics is second only to reading in the elementary grades and, as in reading, remedial work should be prompt. The child who falls behind may develop a fear of the subject that never leaves him.

In high school, every student should take at least one year of math, and those going on to college should take four, the especially gifted taking analytical geometry or calculus in the senior year. In Natick, two new programs will be introduced in the near future, SMSG math in grades 7-10, and General Math III, a combination of geometry and first year algebra.

The bottleneck in producing more and better scientists is the lack of qualified teachers. Starting salaries in the field are such that many qualified people simply can't afford to go into teaching, and are swallowed up by industry. The obvious answer to this problem is higher salaries. Next year, Natick will offer advanced courses in both physics and chemistry, and there is hope of moving biology down to grade nine to allow seniors a second year in physics and chemistry. This would also entail introducing deeper courses in seventh and eighth grade science. But the basic problem still remains; enrollment in the high school will double in the next ten years, and we will need many more qualified teachers.

In foreign languages there is need of broadening the general background to include such languages as Chinese and Russian. Ten years ago, enrollments favored Latin over the modern languages 2 to 1; now the situation has reversed itself. Ten years ago there was no course offered in French III in Natick. Now there are two and next year there will be a course in French IV. We are the proud possessors of one of the first language laboratories in the area, and since its installation, college board scores have increased significantly. There has been a lot of talk about introducing languages in the elementary grades, but we must make sure that such changes are worthwhile before initiating them.

Social studies, like all the other subjects, needs fundamental re-examination in view of the developments in the social sciences in recent years. Teachers should have the right to teach without any outside pressures. Here in Natick we are fortunate in this respect, but in many towns throughout the nation, Communism, for instance, isn't taught or even mentioned. If we are to combat Communism wisely, we must approach it objectively and intelligently; a democracy depends on an informed public.

There has been a great deal of talk recently on the importance of physical education, and many feel that one class period a day should be allotted for it. We must remember, however, that giving more time to one subject area necessarily lessens the amount of time we can give to another; we must reach a balance between subjects that is favorable to all.

In conjunction with these changes in the curriculum, by 1970 there should have been developments in the methods of teaching, too, and among these, four of the giants are television, the teaching machine, team teaching, and ungraded schools. One of the challenges of the 1960's is to learn to use them well.

Television, properly used, could bring superb lectures and demonstrations of scientific experiments to schools that could never afford them ordinarily. Programs broadcast from aircraft reach millions of students in the middle-west, but teachers must cope with the problem of making their courses coincide with those broadcast.

The teaching machine presents a problem to the student and, when he gets it right, proceeds to the next one. Advanced models require the student to write out a response that is compared to the right one. Questions are based on previous ones; so a student may start with no knowledge of a certain field and leave with a thorough grasp of it. Critics of the machine see it as a horrible monster that will dehumanize learning. Those who have used it call such fears neurotic and point out that the automatic washing machine hasn't replaced the housewife but merely left her time for other things. Similarly, they believe that the teaching machine will give the teacher more time to discuss the profound aspects of the subject with individuals, who can make the machines proceed at their own rate.

Team teaching has spread considerably, and it is now estimated that there are over 1000 schools in the country that use it regularly. English and physical education are involved to the greatest degree, followed by math and science, and lastly by foreign languages. It has numerous advantages, among them flexibility. Three English teachers, for example, can have large groups for instruction, tests, and movies, and small groups for discussion. Also, the class benefits by getting the strong points of each teacher; one may excel in grammar, another in literature or other aspects of the subject. Pride challenges each teacher to do his best every day, and he learns and is evaluated by others. There are, however, disadvantages to the system. Discipline, for example, becomes more difficult. There can be no two leaders in the group and the problem of who makes the final decision becomes a difficult one. The team must have time to plan together, and too much emphasis comes to be placed on the presentation part of learning. Also, a large group lecture with an overhead projector, television, and other audio-visual aids is much more exciting than the necessary drill and reaction to the problems. However, these problems are minor compared with the possibilities that team teaching presents.

As for ungraded schools, most of the experimentation to date has been with select groups of youngsters, not a cross section as is necessary. The student can be grouped with others of similar ability, it is true, but then the problem of individual pride comes to the front; is the student willing and at ease with a group of others younger than himself, or older, as the case may be? There is still a lot of work to be done in this area, work that will hopefully lead to a better understanding of the problems involved.

None of the above-mentioned, however, can be of any use if the student is dis-interested. Motivation is the key to learning. If a person is curious and wants to learn, he will; if he doesn't, the best educational methods in the world can't help him. This motivation, contrary to what many parents would like to believe, is not developed solely in school, but in the home. It is there that a respect for and interest in education must be developed, and it must be developed when the child is young, not in high school where it is often too late. If parents will realize this responsibility and try to create this feeling in their children, the battle will be half won, and we can make the best use of improvements in our schools in the future.
